The City of New Haven to Host “Clean and Safe Sweep”

NEW HAVEN, Conn. – Continuing the series of ‘clean and safe’ walking tours of city neighborhoods launched several years ago, Mayor Elicker and officials from more than a dozen city departments will inspect the Westville/Beaver Hills section Tuesday morning and inventory quality-of-life issues requiring a comprehensive, collaborative City response. The enforcement group will make sure property owners in the area are following housing code protocols, that establishments are following business protocols, and to provide guidance for on-campus students and residents. Two or three groups will disburse in different directions to cover different portions of the neighborhood; members of the press are encouraged to walk the neighborhood as well.

Members of the press are invited to walk along Tuesday and document the items flagged by city officials and their first ideas about how those flagged items might be addressed. The enforcement group will make sure all in the area are following housing code protocols, that establishments are following business protocols, and to provide guidance for on-campus students and residents. The group will meet for a press conference at the L.W. Beecher School before heading out to canvass the neighborhood.
